Nani Marquina

The Tiles collection, designed by Nani Marquina, draws its inspiration from the square and rectangular patterns found in the pavements of public spaces. These square and rectangular modules create an architectural pattern so as to be able to add or take away rugs while maintaining the original combination.

Manufactured using the hand-loomed Dhurrie technique and 100% recycled PET produced in India, Tiles rugs are ideal for places such as kitchens, bathrooms, children's rooms and/or outdoors. This material is very hard wearing, firm and easy to clean as well as having good thermal properties, making it a very useful and convenient collection for outdoor spaces too. At the same time, by using 100% recycled PET, a material produced through the recovery and reuse of polyethylene waste, we minimize the impact caused by the burning of plastic bottles in India.

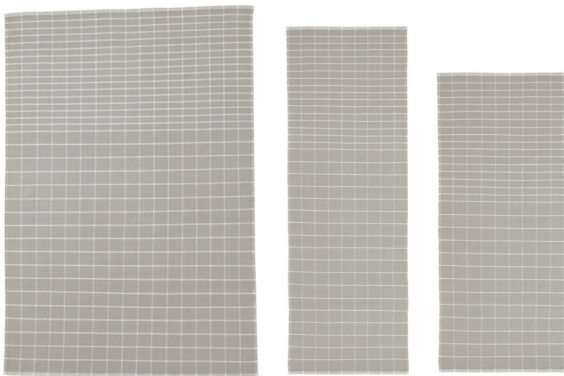

The Tiles collection is available in four shades and eight sizes, four of them also suitable for corridors.

About Nani Marquina

After studying industrial design at the Escuela Massana of Barcelona and realizing the success of her first made-to-order textile designs, Nani Marquina embarked on the at-the-time unknown career of industrial design. Immersed in a unique world of creativity from her early childhood, Nani Marquina's father, Rafael Marquina, one of the pioneers of Spanish design, is the creator of the famous Marquina oil cruet—an icon of Spanish design. This made a profound impression on Nani, fostering a deep conviction to follow in her father's footsteps and the family tradition of design. Nani founded nanimarquina in 1987, driven by the desire to create innovative rugs.
